

ABSTRACT

A new software support system is defined, which provides an efficient system of balancing demand versus supply in order to achieve maximum possible revenue in combination with the best possible customer serve, this in accordance with semiconductor manufacturing principles and conventions of business operation.